On the Sea of Japan's largest island where traditional culture and history sleep, enjoy its natural blessings and picturesque scenery.

Sado, the largest island in the Sea of Japan, is a treasure house of nature, history and cuisine. As the 1171m-high Mt. Kinpoku soars above, seasonal flowers such as daylilies blossom and beautiful ocean views can be enjoyed from the shore. In addition, Sado is an island that has Japan's largest mine that once produced gold and silver ore for about 400 years since the Edo era. Culture of the capital city was also brought to the island due to the arrival of people of culture from Kyoto in ancient times so that arts such as Noh theater thrived. Traditional culture including taiko drumming and lion dances has also been carefully brought down over the ages. There were also ports of call along the marine routes linking the east and west, so Sado received influences from both ends of the country to develop its own unique culture which also includes food culture. With warm and cold currents mixing in the waters surrounding Sado, fishing ports arose to bring in plenty of seafood and seaweed, so that there have been harvests of winter yellowtail, snow crab, cold water prawns, etc. However, Sado isn't just a seafood paradise; since the island crosses the 38th parallel north, flora from both north and south can be observed so that the island is also a paradise of fruits with apples in the northern areas and oranges in the southern areas. Travelers will be greeted by this delicious food but also by the warm-hearted island residents, too. By all means, come here to experience Sado's grand natural environment, plentiful food and warm people.

Tours: Sado Kinzan Gold Mine, Kitazawa Flotation Plant, Shukunegi

The historical site of the Sado Kinzan Gold Mine located in Aikawa District (admission required) had produced 78 tons of gold and 2,380 tons of silver mined over 400 years. Visitors can go through the remaining shafts and other areas to find out about the mine's long history and mining methods.

The Kitazawa Flotation Plant which was constructed to extract gold from ore is a modern relic from approximately 90 years ago. The fantastic nighttime illumination of the plant (please confirm illumination dates) is something not to be missed.

In Ogi District, there is the tradition of the tarai bune, or tub-turned boat (admission required). Along the Ogi coast, where there are many reefs tightly huddled together, the idea behind these unique boats came about from the need to safely harvest seaweed, abalone, sazae shellfish, etc. Getting into the tarai bune is a popular experience for tourists. Nishimikawa Gold Park is an interactive museum where you can find out anything about gold. In the popular gold panning (admission required) activity, swishing the sand in the water can leave some gold which has a heavy relative density, after which you can take it home as a souvenir.

Sado Kisen Jetfoil and Car Ferry

Sado is the largest island in the Honshu area, and there are two routes to access it. One is from Niigata Port to Ryotsu Port on the island via the leisurely car ferry (150 minutes) or the faster jetfoil (about 1 hr 7min), so it is up to you on which ride you prefer to and from the island. On the car ferry, there is a souvenir shop and a restaurant.

The other route is from Naoetsu Port on the mainland to Ogi Port on Sado for which there is a high-speed car ferry (about 100 minutes) which makes round trips.

You can go from Niigata Port to Ryotsu Port and then make your way to Ogi Port back to Naoetsu Port (and vice versa) so you can choose your way of transportation.
